

The Music House for Children and Stepping into Music collaboration

Music and Movement Training for Early Years, Music and Dance Practitioners in the UK

Friday 23rd October 2009
9.00am – 3pm

Experienced training staff from Stepping into Music (an innovative early years workshop and accredited training programme, based on Dalcroze principles), and Music House for Children (a specialist music provision and training school for young children) will provide practical workshops, seminars and discussion opportunities for anyone interested in Early Years music and movement. All are welcome – members of the early years workforce with an interest in developing basic skills in music and/or movement, as well as professional musicians and dancers who want to explore working in an Early Years context.

All participants will

- Experience movement and dance using the Dalcroze inspired approach
- Learn to use and understand appropriate instruments
- Enjoy new songs and activities
- Understand how music and movement can be applied successfully in early years settings
- Take part in practical workshops and creative seminars
- Share ideas and experiences with colleagues from both the early years and performing arts sectors

What do participants take home?

- A published music book for use in their setting
- Lots of interactive experience with trainers and participants from both sectors
- Instruments available at a special rate
- A resources pack supporting the day's activities
- A certificate of attendance
- Signposting and information about future training in early years music and movement

Breaks for networking with refreshments and book resources stall.
